

Give Back to the Breed

After years of hard work faithfully pulling a cart or carrying a rider, a horse deserves a loving and peaceful retirement with green pastures to graze and a snug stall at night. Somewhere safe and loved. Sadly, many horses never get the comfort they have earned.

Pampered show horses discarded when they were injured or no longer brought home ribbons, pleasure riding horses whose owners had financial problems or just lost interest, and Amish buggy horses who spent years pounding pavement and pulling heavy loads. They are old or injured or somehow unwanted. They pass through multiple owners, with each one wringing all that they can from the horse before selling it on. Many end up crammed onto slaughter trucks for a terrible fate. The lucky ones find themselves in rescue, looking for a kind home.

Can you give one of these horses a home?

These “pasture pet” horses need homes where they can simply be horses. They typically cannot be ridden or driven; some may be able to go for slow walks taking kids around an arena, and many are excellent buddies for horses that need a calming influence. Most are happy simply being pasture ornaments and being loved.

Morgans give their heart and soul without asking for anything in return, but Forever Morgans is asking for them. Your Morgans have given you so much, please consider giving back to the breed by opening your heart and home to a horse that needs you.
